OBSERVANCE OF EDUCATION WEEK

TIME CHANGED TO NOVEMBER 18-24 FROM DECEMBER.

Particular Phases of Education Stressed Each Day of Week.

The Bureau of Education will co-operate again this year in the observance of American Education Week with the American Legion and National Education Association. This will be the fourth consecutive year in which an effort has been made to emphasize education week throughout the Nation. Last year's observance far exceeded in interest the previous efforts, and it is expected that this year's week will set a still higher mark of educational enthusiasm.

As was the case last year, each day in the week will be set aside as a day of stressing some particular phase of education which is national in its needs and significance. The days of the week will be observed as follows: Sunday, November 18, For God and Country; Monday, November 19, American Constitution Day; Tuesday, November 20, Patriotism Day; Wednesday, November 21, School and Teacher Day; Thursday, November 22, Literacy Day; Friday, November 23, Community Day; and Saturday, November 24, Physical Education Day.

These suggested topics do not preclude various States and localities from emphasizing those features of education which they may feel require particular attention at this time. They are suggested as topics upon which the whole Nation can well unite. It is impossible for the national program to include all local needs.

FREDERIC-WATERS ROAD NEARLY FINISHED.

Foreman C. S. Barber of the highway construction gang, reports that all the gravel will be on the new Frederic-Waters road by Thursday of this week. About 10 days will be required to put on the shoulder clay and 15 days to finish the shoulder work. This will complete that stretch of highway. Whether or not the work can be completed in the time above stated, depends upon the weather.

Mr. Barber says it is his opinion that this is going to be one of the best pieces of road on trunk-line M14.

The AVALANCHE has had an exceptionally fine trade in Christmas Greeting cards, this season, and there are still a few days in which to accept orders. No orders for plate engraving for Christmas can be accepted after this week, with guarantee of delivery. Orders for cards without stamping of engraved plate will be accepted up to and including Dec. 5th. Place your orders at once if in need of Christmas Greeting cards.

THE SCHOOL TATTLER

Cosch Crane's "wildcats" lost their last game of the season to Traverse City, at Traverse City last Friday.

The game was the hardest fought one of the season, the Crane men holding their west state opponents to two touchdowns in a hour's battle. Traverse City in the first five minutes of play, plowed through the G. H. S. line for a touchdown. Then the Crane men tightened up and held them. Traverse City was unable to make another touchdown until the last three minutes of play, when they went over for their last one.

The weather was not what you call wonderful. The first ten minutes of the game it was snowing and it was very hard to see. Our line was crippled somewhat by the loss of Reagan and Martin. S. Matson played for Martin. Granger for Reagan. These changes shifted the line somewhat. Chuck going to L. T.; Stephan taking R. G.; Barrett taking L. C. after about three minutes of play.

However, football has been established in G. H. S. and we realize now what a great game it is. The games of the 1923 season were as follows:

Mancelona-0	Grayling-6
Traverse City-12	Grayling-6
Standish-0	Grayling-12
Mancelona-0	Grayling-12
Traverse City-14	Grayling-0

Two defeats out of five games, Traverse City being the only team able to defeat us. Mancelona falling twice at the hands of our Crane men and Standish playing to a no decision battle. This year, however we were not able to play as many games as we would have liked to as the schedules were made out before our team was organized. It is probable that we will have a regular schedule next year, so let's hope the spirit of "Football" will live on in G. H. S.

A PROTEST.

"The season of Michigan holly (flex Verticillata) and bittersweet (celastrum sandera) is again here. In May or June the blossoms were attractive only to the bees, and they did not linger long as the store of honey was so minute.

Thoreau claims "Some plants flower in fruiting." To this class belong the Michigan holly and bittersweet. One fond of color could not ride through the country last October, without pausing to admire the crimson berry of the holly or the orange-red berry of the bittersweet. Both flowered prolifically.

Did you ever open the berry of the bittersweet and find the seeds within? Have you ever thought when you were breaking and twisting off the branches of the bittersweet and holly, how much damage you were doing to the shrub, or of the food you were depriving the birds?

If one were to judge by the huge bunches seen on the porches and in the living rooms of many homes last fall, the birds fared meagerly. What happened to the shrubs? Many of them with the bark peeled nearly to the root were left to recover the best they could without the services of a "tree surgeon." This year the yield of "flowers" on these plants will be negligible.

Club women of Michigan, and it is usually the women that "must have that bunch of berries" for a certain basket or vase, let us admire the beautiful Michigan holly and bittersweet in the marshes and by the roadside, and give the birds a chance. Let them feed upon the bright hued berries, and perhaps they will scatter the seeds miles away and thus plant new colonies.

"Let when ye come this way again to view these places fair, ye find green groves and brush and ten all birdless, bleak and bare."

LUXURIES VS. EDUCATION

The ratio of cost of luxuries and that spent for education amounts to 17 to 1, respectively.

The latest available list of the annual cost of these luxuries is as follows:

Tobacco	2,111,000,000
Soft drinks	350,000,000
Perfumes and
Cosmetics	750,000,000

HELP WANTED TO CLEAR AWAY DEBRIS.

The committee in charge of the work of clearing away the debris left over from the fire at the Michelson Memorial church announce that the insurance matters have been adjusted and everything is in readiness to begin work. Anyone willing to assist by donating their services or by paying for a day's labor, are requested to report to Fred Welsh or T. W. Hanson at once.

The salvaging crew for the church and parsonage will begin work Thursday noon, and it is expected to have a good crew on very soon. It is hoped that the people will be prompt and generous in their response, and the committee assures that every assistance will be appreciated by not only the church board but by the people of the community generally. Mr. Welsh says, "Kindly remember this is your church. Our intention is to rebuild, and while we have not nearly enough money to put up the same priced edifice as we had before, we wish to conserve same as much as possible. Hence we are asking all our good citizens and neighbors to come to our aid, as outlined above."

Besides individual service, the services of teams and horses will be required.

We must have room for Christmas goods. Hats much go at 25 per cent off for next 10 days, at the Gift Shop. Cooley and Redson.

FOR THE PEOPLE HAD A MIND TO WORK.

Sermon by Rev. J. H. Baughn.

At the morning services of the Michelson Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, which are being held temporarily in the Danebod hall, the pastor Rev. J. Herman Baughn spoke to a packed house. Chairs had to be placed in the back in order to accommodate the crowd that assembled, some long before time for the service to begin. Mr. Baughn spoke again to a good crowd in the evening at seven o'clock from the text "For the people had a mind to work."

A gist of his message follows: Nehemiah was Cup-bearer to King Artaxerxes and having heard from a friend of the deplorable condition of his beloved city Jerusalem his countenance told of the sufferings in his soul because of it.

As he approached, the king saw his troubled countenance and asked what the trouble was. After being told, Nehemiah asked permission to go down to Jerusalem and rebuild the walls. Artaxerxes not only gave him permission to go but also an order all the timber he might need and an order upon the Quartermaster for all the stone he might need and not being content with this he gave him command over 1500 men and in the remarkable short time of 52 days the walls were rebuilt and everything was in tip-top shape. Why? "For the people had a mind to work."

There were many others in captivity who knew more about the condition of the city than did Nehemiah but they were unconcerned about it. As soon as Nehemiah heard of the deplorable condition he became enthusiastic about it. Enthusiasm for God is just like that. If I have it it comes else will get it from me. It is just like the measles, if someone gets them they are sure to give them to someone else. But it is one thing to know and another to do. I may know and I may not do. God will hold me responsible for what I knew and did not.

It would be downright hypocrisy for me to pray for the rebuilding of our church and then not be willing to work for it. Our prayers are worth just what we are willing to redeem them at in works. St. James said: "Faith without works is dead." The only way God can come in contact with the world with his message is through human agents. He might have sent his angels to preach and sing, but it was not his way. He wants you and I. The thing that I fear most is that I may not know my duty or knowing it I may not do it.

"I know that my Redeemer liveth." That is a fine expression of faith but St. Paul was not content to let the other fellow do all the work. The farmer sows his grain in the spring in faith that he will have a crop to harvest in the fall but he does not rest there. He goes about cultivating the crop until fall when he harvests it. He sows in faith and then works to get the harvest.

A dreamer by the name of Watts sat and saw a vapor rise from a kettle. He saw a locomotive in that vapor. But there is many a story of hard work between Watts vision of the locomotive in the kettle and the practical Iron Horse that can run from New York to Chicago in 18 hrs. What we pray for is loyalty and co-operation in the building of our new church and it will gently but surely come to pass. May God Bless the message.

N. A. C. C. ISSUES RULES FOR NEW CAR OWNERS

SUGGESTS TAGS BE ATTACHED TO CARS WHEN PURCHASED; CARE STRESSED.

Believing that the careful observation of a few simple traffic rules will materially help safer travel on the highways, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has issued Ten Commandments of Safety for Motorists.

These, according to Firestone highway service men, are printed on tags which are attached to the steering wheel so that the purchaser may have the maxims in mind when he first secures his car. These commandments also will be printed in automobile instruction books.

The "N. A. C. C. Ten Commandments" are as follows:

I—ALWAYS remember you are an engineer fully responsible.

II—ALWAYS test your brakes when starting, and have them inspected frequently.

III—NEVER pass a street car when it is stopping, or, if the law permits, proceed very slowly past it at the legal distance.

IV—EXERCISE especial care in crossing in front of a street car or in passing it, as you cannot tell what may be coming on the other side.

V—ALWAYS signal with hand when slowing down, turning or stopping, even though you have an automatic or mechanical warning device.

VI—LOOK before you back up and sound the horn three times.

VII—TRY to drive with using the horn as little as possible. A sudden noise may stop pedestrians on their tracks rather than warning them.

VIII—DON'T count too much on the common sense of the other fellow. No one is 100 per cent alert all the time.

IX—DRIVE slowly in streets where children are playing. Remember your own childhood.

X—CROSS crossings cautiously. Warning bells may be out of order, watchmen or gate operators may be off duty. Trains cannot stop as quickly as you can. Shift into second to avoid stalling on tracks.

Yes, we have no dark days, there is always a ray of sunshine in the Window Studio and now is the time to start those Christmas Photos. An enlargement with every $5.00 order until Dec. 10th.

THANKSGIVING DAY PROCLAMATION.

(By the Governor.)

Pursuant to a custom which has endured through many generations and by direction of the President we have again been called upon to set aside one day of this glad and prosperous year for Thanksgiving. There is no day in all the year so wholly American as Thanksgiving day and there is no day in the year when greater opportunity is offered for reviving our patriotism and making manifest our love of country.

America, in this year about to end, has much for which to be thankful. In our sorrow over the loss of a great and good leader, the Almighty lifted up another great and good President to guide us. The sudden death of a great chieftain might be expected to cause disorder and political dissatisfaction. Our advance onward and upward under the direction of our new President has been without interruption or turmoil, proving once again that this is a nation guided by Providence. A sister nation suffered from a frightful calamity, through our bounteous prosperity we were able to relieve suffering and quell despair.

"For the Lord is good; His mercy everlasting."—So we have endeavored to display to the world that His ideal is our ideal and that we have mercy unbounded. Our destiny is service to humanity. Let us not be swayed from our purpose.

Our continued social peace and tranquility and our amazing prosperity, educational, agricultural and business development are due to the mercies of the Lord because we have always been thankful and Him.

But because our crops have been good and our industrial conditions satisfactory, let us not forget the necessity of careful living, let us not spend our bounty in extravagance, let us never be wasteful of that which has been provided. Let us conserve so that no matter what the emergency, we will always be able to provide freely for those not so fortunate as ourselves.

In pursuance to our time honored custom and in accordance with the proclamation issued by the President of the United States, and by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of Michigan, I hereby designate Thursday, November 29, 1923, as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer.

"Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this twelfth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-seventh.

Governor.

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."

—Mrs. M. O'NEIL, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

CHAPTER XVII

The Finding of Gomez.

The little squad of cavalry moved up the creek bottom with much caution. The rangy young lieutenant, exercising his first independent command, was determined to neglect no precaution.

Deborah begged for haste, but the officer remained adamant, and, at last, in despair, utterly wearied, her mind in a chaos she rode on listlessly beside him. Kelleen must be dead; she dare not even dream anything else. She had heard the shot, seen the burst of flame, caught sight of his toppling body plunging over the edge of the cliff. The men who shot him had no doubt; they had fired to kill, believed they had killed; and gone away satisfied—Bob Meager and the Mexican. She shivered at the memory of them. Her husband! That murderer her husband! He could claim her, would claim her if he lived; legally, she belonged to him. The ceremony was sacrilege, a hideous mockery, yet it was legal; it left her forever in the power of that brute. She shuddered at recollection of that scene in the moonlight, the tearing, drunken faces, the sharp voice of Judge Garrity, the brutal grip with which Bob Meager held her, those hateful words which bound her to such unspeakable shame. And then the struggle to save herself, the hours of torture waiting for his coming, the broken door, the clutch of his hands, the drunken breath on her face, the blow which set her free. Good G—d! could this all be true! The fresh night air, the escape through the black night, the meeting with Daniel Kelleen.

He had been a man, a real man; he had died for her. Undeclared, unnoticed the tears welled into her eyes, and fell on the saddle pommel. She could see nothing but his face, realize nothing but that they were riding now to bring back his body. She had not known before that she loved him, but now, in hereafter and despair, she comprehended that all the brightness and hope had gone from life. She yet lived, must continue to live—the wife of Bob Meager.

It must have been nearly noon when the little cavalcade debouched from the bed of the stream, forced their jaded horses up the bank, and came to where the riders could look down into the half-concealed valley below. Advance scouts awaited them here among the rocks, to point out the trail, curving downward through a ravine. They had discovered no signs of recent passage, no marks of hoofs; nor were there any signs of human presence in the lower valley.

The lieutenant studied the scene through his glasses, yet vaguely suspicious of some trick, consulted with the sergeant, and finally spoke to Deborah.

"This must be the place," he said, "but it seems deserted. Do you recognize anything?"

She sat straight in the saddle, a new light in her eyes, as she pointed the directions.

"I can never forget. Straight ahead down there is where they were storing the things—a fire burned there by that big rock; you can see a whisp of smoke even now. This trail must lead direct. Over there," she hid her face for an instant in her hands as though to shut out the sight, "is the cliff over which Captain Kelleen fell, and just beyond, at the upper end of the valley is the cave I told you about. I am going down whether you or your soldiers come or not. I must learn the truth."

She forced her horse forward, and the others followed, waiting for no command, the sergeant riding almost beside her in the narrow trail. They found the storehouse, back within the shadow of the great rock, so concealed by trees as to be invisible a few yards away. It was deserted, unguarded; and satisfied as to this fact, convinced by a hundred signs that the entire outfit had indeed returned the way they came, the lieutenant scattered his force to explore the upper valley. His mood had changed from suspicion of this girl to faith in her strange story. Things were exactly as she had described. Dismounted, their horses being led behind them in readiness for any emergency, the squad advanced, the men with carbines in their hands. The sergeant kept close in against the southern cliff until he came to where Deborah pointed out the spot of Kelleen's fall. They found no body, no signs to indicate any such tragedy. Carney gazed about in perplexity.

"You are sure this is the place, miss?" he asked doubtfully.

"Yes, sergeant; we were on the rock up there, the one jutting out over the edge; there is no other spot like it."

His eyes, narrowed, surveyed the distance, marking every detail.

"Then it's likely he struck them trees, miss, and there may be a ledge there that he lit on. I'm going up."

He fought his way from rock to rock, with difficulty finding foot and handhold, winding in and out of crevices, and using every shrub to aid his progress upward. Once or twice he paused, as though blocked, clinging to the face of the cliff like a fly, yet found a way, and went on. Those below watched breathlessly until the man finally crept over an outcropping ledge, imperceptible from where they stood, and disappeared. It seemed as though he was gone a long while, Deborah, hand pressed on her heart, never removed her eyes from the spot, or stirred. What had he found up there? Surely he must have discovered something the dead, mangled body, no doubt. Then he appeared again, alone, standing up and gazing down at them. His voice as he halted there below, sounded clear, exultant, a new ring in its tone.

"He ain't here, miss, but, by G—d, sir, I believe he's alive."

Deborah could not speak, could not utter a sound. Alive! Alive! why that was impossible; her very heart seemed to stop beating. She could only stare up at the man dazed and helpless. It was the lieutenant who answered.

"You say he is alive, Carney?"

"Well, he sure left here alive, sir, and on his own legs. I found the place where he come down, an' where he got on his feet again. There wasn't nobody else here helpin' him, an' he started off along this ledge—up a bit, I should say, but goin' alone. Whatever happened since, sir, he certainly left here able to navigate. Maybe I better follow the trail?"

"Yes, go on, Sergeant."

Deborah's limbs trembled so she could scarcely walk for the first few steps. She clung gratefully to the lieutenant's arm, her gaze never deserting the man moving cautiously along the narrow ledge of rock high above them. Alive! Daniel Kelleen was alive! Nothing else mattered; her hands clasped tightly at the officer's sleeve.

"Have the sergeant hurry, please have him hurry! He doesn't need to trace Captain Kelleen's trail. I am sure I knew where he was going."

"Where was that?"

"To the cave I had found, and told him about; it is there just beyond that mound. Good G—d, Lieutenant, there are horses grazing yonder—they have found him already."

There were two animals in a little cove, huddled, and nibbling at the short grass, but both saddled and bridled. They had the Meager ranch brand on their flanks, and the sergeant, joining the party below, easily followed the trail of two men on foot until they reached the mound of earth, and ascended the opposite side. Deborah pressed her way forward, too eager now to be longer held back, yet fully realizing the danger confronting them.

"Be careful here," she warned. "They are certainly in there—two or three, at least, and they will shoot. Here, Sergeant, let me show you; I know the way."

They were already before the clinging vines; her hands trembled as she forced these aside revealing the black vacancy behind. The startled sergeant pressed them further back, starting bewildered into the void, his service revolver thrust forward, an oath breaking from his lips.

"By G—d! but this beats h—t, sir. D—n it, but I'm goin' in!"

He went over the barrier of rock unmolested, unstoppered, and recklessly Deborah followed. The lieutenant paused an instant.

"Jones, you and Calhoun follow us; the others remain out here. Keep your eyes open, lads."

The next moment he had also scrambled through the opening, and crouched down beside the trembling girl. Just ahead, the two could dimly distinguish Carney, leaning forward, peering into the total darkness beyond.

"It's—it's perfectly level, the floor is," she whispered. "You can follow along the wall—I did."

They advanced together slowly, feeling their way, scarcely a sound breaking the silence. Suddenly the sergeant, slightly in advance, stopped, feeling at something on the floor with his feet; then he stooped over.

"By G—d, here's a dead man!"

"A dead man? Are you sure?"

"He's dead—right, sir. Where's the flashlight? We've got to find out what this means."

"Jones has it; Jones, come up here. Give me the flash."

The round glare of light struck the side walls, swept over the still kneeling sergeant, glinting on his drawn weapon, and then touched the motionless body outstretched on the floor. At last it rested on the upturned face. The sergeant stared down as though he saw a ghost.

"By G—d!" he ejaculated at last, "by G—d! it's the old devil himself."

"What's that, Carney? You know him?"

"Know him! Why, sir, Lieutenant Gomez, Manuel Gomez—there's fifty thousand dollars on him dead or alive. Well, he's dead all right."

"Gomez, the outlaw; but are you sure?"

"Sure," the sergeant rose to his feet and swung about. "Sure? H—t!—begging your pardon, sir—why shouldn't I be sure? I've chased that old fox ever since I've been in the army, after him down in old Mexico. It's Manuel Gomez lying there, and it was a knife that killed him."

The boy lieutenant's face was white in the reflected light, but his lips were firmly set.

"Well, he's dead now," he said sternly, "and it is up to us to find out what all this means."

He lifted the flash from off the upturned face, and sent it dancing along the gray walls into the black chasm ahead.

"But, Lieutenant, this ain't no cave, sir; it's a bloomin' mine," a voice spoke from behind in tone of surprise.

"What makes you think that, Calhoun?"

"Cause it's been blasted out most, ly, sir, or else picked. I've been a miner myself, and ought to know. Maybe there was a cave yere once, but I tell yer, sir, these yere walls have been hand-worked, or I'm a piker."

"All right, we've got to explore the passage just the same. Come on, men."

He flashed the warning light ahead, as they advanced, taking his own place beside the sergeant, and compelling Deborah to remain behind with the two soldiers. As the passage curved to the right the leaders crept forward with extreme caution, to gain view of what lay hidden beyond, Carr reaching out his hand to send the flicker of light dancing down the narrow tunnel. The flashing rays brought no response, awoke no sound of movement, and Carney ventured to protrude his head far enough around the protecting rock to gain view of what was beyond. The flashlight was no longer needed to reveal the scene. At the slight opening, leading to the desert above, streamed the glare of day, white and dazzling to his eyes after the pitch darkness in which he had been blindly feeling his way forward. It rested, a pool of light on the floor, and in its very center, every detail outlined as in an etching, were two bodies, one face downward, curled in grotesque shape, the other lying at full length, features upturned to the low roof. Beyond these the flare of the flashlight, leaping across this narrow space of day, exhibited a jumbled mass of rock blocking the passage from top to bottom. They seemed to have attained the very end of things.

The startled sergeant stared speechless—first at those motionless bodies, death pictured in each attitude; then beyond at a strange, ghastly, white face, on which the searchlight fastened, suddenly played. Suddenly something else reflected into his eyes, the sparkle of an upturned revolver's polished tube.

"Who are you?" asked a hoarse voice sternly. "Stop there until you answer."

"My G—d, sir!" was the instant cry. "I'm Carney, Sergeant Carney."

"The blue sky," he said, his voice trembling, "how beautiful it is. G—d! but it is good to get out of that hole, with dead men everywhere."

"Yes," she replied, "but don't try to talk now; that is all over with."

"But I want to talk," he insisted. "It keeps me from thinking; it makes me know it is all real—this blue sky, and you."

"Then if you must, tell me what happened; it seems almost a miracle."

"It was a miracle, and I am not sure but you were God's messenger," he replied slowly. Then slowly, hesitatingly, prompted now and then by a question, he told his story; his voice growing stronger, as he spoke. The guard sat on a rock a dozen feet away, their carbines between their knees, eyes on the deserted valley below. The girl bent over eagerly, seeking not to lose a word. At the end Kelleen asked suddenly:

"The paper you took from the boy's hand—what was it?"

"Only a map, very roughly drawn, and written out in Spanish. I could make little out of it—see."

She held it out before him, a yellow, creased paper, looking a century old. He held it for a moment in his own hands, peering at the crisscross of lines impatiently.

"Perhaps it was one Alvara left," he said slowly, "and the boy had found it. He followed the rainbow to the end."

"And we will never know?"

"No; the end was death."

They were quiet a long while; then his hand moved and touched her own. Her eyes, which had been on the valley, dropped wonderingly to his face.

"This is not all, is it—just to be alive again?" he asked softly.

"I—I hardly know what you mean."

"Back there in the tunnel," he insisted, "when I first looked up into your eyes I read a message; I want to read it again."

"A message—are you sure?"

"Yes, dear, I am sure; it was a message of love."

She was no longer looking at him, and she caught her breath. Then their eyes met once more.

"It is the same message always, Daniel Kelleen," she said simply.

Oldest Known Will.

A will executed in 2548 B. C. is the oldest extant. It is written on papyrus by an Egyptian named Uah. In it he gave his home and other property to his wife, to be left by her to any of their children; arranged for the burial of himself and wife, and appointed a guardian for a son. In fact the will differs little from one which might be executed today.

Church happened to get it in his helping there would be a two-hour prayer on the next Wednesday night.

In the old days all salads were cooked. There was no such things as hearts of lettuce. In the spring we had "greens." In the winter we had boiled cabbage or what has recently been called "liberty cabbage."

On "Main Street" salad is still considered a foreign dish—something that the "French do," something that is served only when the preacher comes or when one wants to make a special stir.

YOUNGEST MAYOR A MEMBER

Thomas H. Quinn, Chosen Chief Executive of Fairbault, Minn., When Only Twenty-Two.

Only a short time was necessary for many war veterans to obtain prominence in civil life following discharge from the service, as demonstrated by the career of Thomas H. Quinn, an American Legion member, who is probably the youngest mayor in the United States.

Quinn was first elected mayor of Fairbault, Minn., in April, 1921, when he was only twenty-two years old. He achieved such a good record in office that he was re-elected in 1923 for two years.

Born in Fairbault, Quinn was educated in the public and parochial schools, St. Thomas college and St. Paul College of Law. Graduated from the latter institution in 1919, he found that he was too young to be admitted to the bar. He obtained a position with the internal revenue service in 1919 and remained in that work until August, 1920, when he opened a law office in Fairbault.

Quinn is president of the Southern Minnesota Baseball league and a director of the Minnesota Municipalities league. He was largely responsible for the success of the recent convention of the American Legion department of the American Legion held in Fairbault, and is prominent in activities of the veterans' organization throughout the state.

TO BURY VETERANS OF WARS

Not Exceeding $100 to Be Allowed for Interment of Participants in American Conflicts.

Information has been sent to all posts of the American Legion concerning the payment of funeral expenses for indigent World war veterans by the United States Veterans' Bureau. A sum not exceeding $100 will be paid where it is shown that the deceased did not leave sufficient funds to defray expense of burial.

In addition to this payment, transportation charges will be paid by the government from place to death to that of interment, if it is within the continental limits of the United States. Burial in national cemeteries will follow if requested.

Proof that the veteran is indigent, that no money or property is due him, and that relatives refuse to provide such funds is required.

This ruling will relieve many posts of the Legion frequently called upon to pay funeral expenses of war veterans dying in their locality, without funds. The ruling applies to veterans of all American wars.

To Provide Playground.

Because demand for increased school facilities had necessitated building on property formerly utilized as a playground in Bridgewater, Mass., the children of the city had no place for recreation. The American Legion in Bridgewater, realizing the need of school children, took the initiative in securing such grounds by circulation of a petition calling for a special election by the townspeople, with a view to the purchase of certain tracts for recreation purposes.

Chinese Torture.

Shrill walls of torment were issuing from the inside of the house, but eight-year-old Bertie, seated on the piazza steps, seemed totally unconcerned. "Heavens," called a neighbor, "your little brother must be frightfully ill."

"No, not 'zackly," confided Bertie. "He just pulled down a jug of molasses in the pantry on him, an' maw's comin' his hair for Sunday school."

—The American Legion Weekly.

Auxiliary Helps Boy Scouts.

An appropriation of $150 was recently made by the American Legion Auxiliary unit in Seaside, Ore., so that the local troop of boy scouts might carry on their annual work. The women of the auxiliary also presented the troops with a stand of national colors.

Special Consideration.

Ex-service men of allied nations now residing in Canada are receiving special consideration at the hands of the department of soldiers' civil re-establishment. If a United States veteran in Canada is in need of medical service, on authorization of the United States veterans' bureau, the Dominion director of medical service will afford this treatment. Compensation claims are handled direct, though for the most part, American Legion members are regulating service matters for veterans of that country.

It comes with every sack of cement. It has been made possible through the Portland Cement Association by the eighty-six cement manufacturers who are its members.

They realized that important research and educational work was necessary to give people the best information on how to use cement. They also realized that this could be done better by unified effort than by any individual company alone.

As a result, you may have for the asking the benefit of this Association's long and exhaustive studies on how best to use cement for the most satisfactory results in concrete construction.

Whatever use you plan to make of cement—whether you are building a concrete hog house or concrete dairy barn, a stretch of concrete walk or a concrete road, a silo or a skyscraper, a home, workshop or a factory—you needn't guess. You can know.

If you want information about the usefulness of concrete under certain conditions, how to mix or place it to get the greatest value out of every sack of cement—you can get it by writing any one of our 28 offices listed below.

Supplying dependable information without charge by booklet, by letter or by personal conference when necessary, is the work of this Association. Millions of helpful booklets, covering a multitude of uses of concrete, are distributed annually to people who know they needn't guess—who know they can get the facts from us.

One of our new booklets, "Concrete in Home Sanitation," will surprise you with the number of easy ways in which concrete can be used to make the home healthier and happier. Address our nearest district office for your free copy.

Washington Rose

The Mary Washington rose is perhaps the most ambitious attempt at floriculture made by George Washington. He made it at Mount Vernon in the last years of his life when he had laid aside the cares of state. He started the rose from seeds brought from one of the older gardens in Philadelphia, grafted the young growth on the native sweetbrier and named the result after his mother, Mary Washington.

It was probably the first attempt in this country to hybridize the monthly with the yearly blooming rose. The Mary Washington rose became famous; it still adorns an ancient trellis in the family garden at Mount Vernon, but if all the requests for cuttings were granted, there would soon be nothing left of it.—Youth's Companion

HORSE PASSING IN MARYLAND

Retiring From Transportation Field at the Rate of One and One-Half Per Cent a Year.

Old Dobbin is retiring from the transportation field on the state roads at the rate of 1½ per cent a year. Traffic tests taken on the main arteries of the state roads system show that he is exactly 1.45 per cent weaker as a competitor to the motor driven vehicles than he was last year. The tests covering 48 hours were taken recently. In the old days when horse-flesh was supreme on the roads Sunday was his big day. The recent Sunday tests show now that on 24 roads the horse-drawn vehicular traffic was only 82-100 of 1 per cent of the entire traffic. Dobbin's big day is Tuesday. Then he can claim only 4.68 per cent of the entire traffic.—Baltimore News.

MANY people who drink coffee regularly are troubled with insomnia; or they feel nervous, "headachy," or suffer from indigestion.

It may be hard for such men and women to believe that coffee is responsible for the way they feel. Because they have always drunk coffee, it hardly seems possible that this old habit could cause trouble.

But there is one sure way to find out whether coffee is harming you. Just stop its use for a week or so, and drink Postum.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—absolutely free from caffeine, the drug in coffee, which disturbs the health and comfort of many.

After a week or two on Postum, you will sleep better and feel better; then your own good judgment should decide whether you go back to coffee or continue on the Road to Wellville with Postum.

FREDERIC SCHOOL NOTES.

High School.
Mr. Bailey visited the High School room last Tuesday. He gave us a fine talk on dairying. He said we should all know how to choose a cow and how to feed her when we get her, the feeds containing the most protein and how much to feed for the best yield of milk. He had a pair of milk scales with him which he showed to the students, also two large pictures of purebred cattle and a chart. Before leaving he passed out a number of booklets among the classes. We enjoyed his talk very much and hope he will come again in the near future.

The Freshman class is making rapid progress in their classic, "The Princess."

home with her daughters Mrs. Chas. Feldhauser and Mrs. Arthur Feldhauser, in which neighborhood she made many warm friends. Her sudden demise leaves a vacancy which cannot be filled in her children's homes, where she will be greatly missed by those who loved her best. Besides the children above named the deceased is mourned by a son Morris Ward of Detroit, three grandchildren, one sister Mrs. Ed. Hesson of Sandusky and two brothers John and Henry Gillard of Spruce, Mich.

The funeral was held the following Saturday with brief services at the Feldhauser home at 9:00, followed by services in Frederic, held at the M. church. Services were conducted by Rev. F. E. Hart, pastor of the church and the remains were taken to Gaylord and interred in Springfield cemetery at that place.

SCHOOL OFFICERS MEETING A SUCCESS.

At the School Officers meeting in Grayling Wednesday, Nov. 14, a lively interest was taken for the betterment of the schools of Crawford County. The forenoon meeting was held in the high school building and the afternoon meeting in the court house. Several classes from the Grayling school came into the meeting and sang and reflected much credit not only to the school but also to the teacher in charge. B. E. Fort, Asst. Supt. of Public Instruction conducted the meeting and spoke in the forenoon in regard to recent changes that have been made in the school laws and in the afternoon concerning the general welfare of our schools. Mr. Fort is a pleasing and a plain speaker and many questions were asked that helped to bring out his ideas.

The burning of the church and parsonage across the way brought the meeting to a sad close before they had the opportunity of listening to Mrs. Squires, the county nurse, and R. L. Bailey. About twenty-five were present which was a very good attendance for Crawford county.

B. OF T. TALKS RE-APPORTIONMENT

The noonday luncheon at Shoppens Inn today by the Board of Trade was devoted to discussing the proposition of the reapportionment of legislative districts as it pertains to this section of the State.

President Peterson stated that as at present planned it was the idea to incorporate the counties of Crawford, Roscommon, Kalkaska and Missaukee into one representative district.

Best Kiely of Roscommon, stated that he was not in favor of that plan, forgetting that ultimately the redistricting must come and that it was pertinent that these northern counties come to some definite decision as to their desires. He said it appears to him that Crawford county was trying to use Roscommon county in order to further its own interests, and that he was well satisfied with the district as it now stands—Roscommon, Clare and Gladwin counties.

Supervisor M. A. Bates gave a detailed statement of the population of these proposed four counties, their geographic location and similarity of interests. He scouted the idea of Crawford county having designs for using our neighboring county to the south, only in the interests, as it pertains to the community and state in general. It appears that the only important point made by Mr. Kiely was the fact that the people of his county were almost strangers to the citizens of Kalkaska. A similar condition existed between the people of Crawford and Kalkaska counties up to within a year or two, and we find that it has been a real and added pleasure and privilege to become acquainted with the citizens of that commonwealth. Here is a combination that it seems should be ideal and advantageous to the people of all four counties. There seems to be general approval of the plan by the citizens of all four counties with the possible exception of Roscommon which was represented by Mr. Kiely only, and it is understood that his sentiments are not in general shared at home and that Prosecuting Attorney Hiram Smith and others of that county are in favor of the four-county plan.

This being the final meeting of the fiscal year for the Board of Trade, President Peterson admonished the members to stand faithfully behind his successor and work for the success of Grayling.

THE RED LOCK by David Anderson

NEARLY one hundred years ago the Wabash valley was a land of uncommon romance, virile frontier types and vigorous action. The river itself was the seat of a prosperous pearl-fishing industry and to its shores came the hardy, reckless spirits of the time, very much akin to the adventurers who are always found where possibilities of sudden wealth exist.

In a previous story, "The Blue Moon," David Anderson penned the romance of the pearl fishers. In "The Red Lock" he has gone into another phase of the locality. The period is during the Forties and early Fifties, and the tale recounts a drama as stirring, as true to life and habitat as anything that has been written about any section of pioneer America.

It is logical that we should ask the prospective buyer to gauge the worth of the Studebaker Special-Six by the measure of its sales success.

Why mention the distinctive motor or any other feature of this unusual car when the American public itself has established the greatest of all selling arguments in its favor by buying it?

Automobile license figures for every state in the Union continue to tell their own uncolored stories of Studebaker popularity.

Stresemann to Repudiate Treaty and Abandon the Ruhr and Rhineland.

MELLON FOR TAX REDUCTION

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CHANCELLOR STRESEMANN of Germany made two momentous decisions last week. The first was that the national government would temporarily abandon the Rhineland and the Ruhr, economically, to the French and Belgian armies of occupation, the workers and state employees of those regions being warned that henceforth they could not look to Berlin for help. The second was to repudiate the treaty of Versailles and refuse to comply with any of its provisions as long as the French and Belgians continue to occupy the Ruhr.

But Stresemann was playing a desperate game in the endeavor to save off his own downfall, and at this writing it seems likely he will fail. The Democrats and Catholics decided to quit him, and the Socialists already have done so. Hitherto President Ebert has firmly supported Stresemann, but as the week was drawing to a close it appeared that he, too, was ready to abandon the chancellor and place his reliance in General von Seeckt, whom he had made supreme military dictator.

The decision to abandon the occupied regions was made necessary, according to the chancellor, by the Reichsbank's refusal of paper credits with which to meet the expense of maintaining the unemployed during the next two weeks—expenses which will call for 300,000,000 gold marks ($75,000,000). The government, said Stresemann, was forced, because of the total breakdown of industry and commerce, to choose between the destruction of all Germany, with the possible salvation of the occupied areas, and abandoning those regions to their fate temporarily.

Return to Germany of the former crown prince is complicating matters more than had been expected. The allies demanded his immediate delivery for trial as a war criminal, but the Berlin government replied that if he was to be tried, he would be tried by a German court. Frederick William went quietly to his Silesian estate at Oels, but a French correspondent in Berlin says he is about ready to spring a coup for seizure of the throne and is being financed by a group of American, English and Dutch bankers.

The story continues that the ex-prince has obtained the solid support of the Reichswehr and will soon march on Berlin at the head of a division of infantry with the assurance that no other divisions of the national army will oppose him. The French also assert that scores of German factories are working night and day making ammunition and other war material. It is believed in Paris that France may proceed to occupy Frankfurt and Hamburg if Frederick William is not expelled or surrendered to the allies. A flurry was caused last week by a story that the former Kaiser was preparing to return to Germany, and already had his passports. This was flatly denied. Advice from Rome was to the effect that the Vatican would like to see the German monarchy restored in order to prevent seizure of power by the communists.

The government of the United States has informed the allies that it will not intervene to keep the Hohenzollerns from returning to the throne, and it is not certain what course Great Britain will pursue. France probably is strong enough to do all that is necessary without help. Bavaria's fascists are not wholly subdued by the failure of the Hitler coup, but seem unable to do anything more just now except create disturbances. Hitler, wounded, is under arrest. Ludendorff also was arrested but was immediately released on parole.

All hope for an agreement on the Hughes reparations committee plan was abandoned when Washington informed the world it could not accept the French restrictions. Premier Poincare thereupon instructed M. Barthou to propose to the reparations committee that it nominate a committee of experts such as the "United States" to examine Germany's capacity to pay, and its resources in foreign countries.

HUGO STINNES and his plans have become of intense interest to the world. The Westphalian industrial magnate, who has made himself one of the richest men on earth by taking advantage of his country's misfortune, is said to have made up his mind to start a combat with the Standard Oil company for supremacy in the oil industry on four continents. His fields are in Argentina, Oklahoma, Texas, China, Mesopotamia and the Caucasus. More of his colossal schemes will be heard later. Not even Stinnes himself knows the extent of his vast wealth, yet when he was asked to contribute something for the hungry children of Germany he replied that he was maintaining a soup kitchen in Berlin and could do nothing more. The kitchen is supplied with left-over food from one of Stinnes' hotels. The fact that Stinnes, Krupp, and the other multimillionaire profiteers of Germany could easily provide all that these "starving" children need makes many Americans wonder why they should be called on to contribute to that cause. General Allen's appeals will fall on many deaf ears.

KING GEORGE of Greece, who is accused of complicity in the recent revolt which was speedily put down, has been asked by the party in power to abdicate and leave the country in order that the people may decide unhampered on the regime they prefer. Most of the Greeks, it is believed, wish for a republic. Great Britain, however, is doing its best to keep George on his throne, considering him a strong tie between Greece and England.

WILLIAM G. MADDOX and Senator Hiram Johnson have declared their candidacy for the presidential nomination, the former as a Democrat and the latter as a Republican. Henry Ford, it is reliably reported, has decided not to be a candidate.

Mr. McDoo's announcement was informal and rather by inference, but Senator Johnson's was formal and at length. He challenged President Coolidge and any other aspirants to go before the voters, especially in the primary states, on the issue of American foreign policy. He also declared war on "reaction" and made an appeal for a "revitalized Republican party, free of the influence of static reaction, free of destructive radicalism." His statement to the public was issued in Chicago.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

ON ABOUT the last Thursday in November the thoughts of all good Americans turn to Plymouth Rock. The nation-wide observance of "Forefathers' Day" celebrates the anniversary of the actual landing on Plymouth Rock, but Thanksgiving Day, in one of its aspects, is a sort of preliminary celebration. In fact, we Americans, in our subconscious minds, link up Thanksgiving with the Pilgrims of Plymouth. Just as we do Christmas with the jolly Dutch burghers of New Amsterdam.

It would be fascinating to have the Pilgrims back again at Plymouth at Thanksgiving or Forefathers' Day and watch their faces and view their astonishment.

The present looks of the place would require much explaining. For example, there is the new canopy over the Rock which has replaced the sturdy but decidedly unlovely granite structure that long did duty. And the fact that it was erected by the Society of the Colonial Dames of America would complicate the story.

They might not recognize the statue of Massasoit, erected by the Independent Order of Red Men, until they had read the inscription. Anyway, Massasoit is entitled to a statue as good friend of the Pilgrims. He was head chief of the Wampanoags whose lands extended from Cape Cod to Narragansett bay. He made, in 1621, an offensive and defensive treaty with the Pilgrims, which he never broke. Edward Winslow's description in "Good News From New England" (1624) of Massasoit's illness and how he cured the chief is one of the most picturesque passages in American literature. It was King Philip, youngest son of Massasoit, who was head and front of King Philip's war (1674-76) that nearly wiped out the English colonies.

Tradition has it that the Pilgrims were sour of visage, but probably they would smile at features of the "Pilgrims' Progress" as depicted in the accompanying photograph; possibly they would also be amused at the modern idea of the Pilgrims themselves, as shown in the other picture, approved by the art critics.

The general observance of Forefathers' Day, like that of Thanksgiving Day, has been a matter of evolution from small beginnings. The hundredth anniversary of the landing came and went quite unnoticed and unmarked. The first stirrings of the beginning had gone the backward, seeking the buried treasures of the past had not yet come, according to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, a speaker at the tercentenary celebration. Half a century in his peroration, picturing an assemblage 100 years later which would recount the nation's advancement:

On the morning of that day, although it will not disturb us in our repose, the voice of acclamation and gratitude commencing on the Rock of Plymouth shall be transmitted through millions of the sons of the Pilgrims until it loses itself in the murmurs of the Pacific seas.

Now, Senator Lodge, in his tercentenary oration quoted this fine passage. And as he spoke the words President Calvin Coolidge, then governor of Massachusetts, sitting in the ancient, rush-bottomed chair of Carver, the Pilgrim governor, talked by telephone across the continent with Governor Stephens of California at Sacramento. Thus was Webster's prophecy of 1820 fulfilled in 1920.

As to the meaning of the landing of the Pilgrims, it can be no more fittingly put than it was put by Cal-more was to elapse before the fact that in Plymouth something had once happened which merited celebration and made such demand for the outward signs of remembrance as to insist upon a visible manifestation. In January, 1793, a club was started by 12 young men of Plymouth, and in the following December they decided to have a dinner on December 22 in commemoration of the landing of the Pilgrims. Accordingly, upon that day there was a procession, and then a dinner was eaten, and toasts were given in honor of the leaders among the founders of the settlement. The following year, on the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, the people here again held a celebration, and this time they had an oration described in the record as "words spoken with modesty and firmness," by Edward Winslow, and there was also a poem by Alexander Scamwell. These commemorations went on through the years of the Revolution until 1793, and then came an unexplained gap of 12 years until 1805, when the celebration of the anniversary was again renewed, and continued thereafter with the omission only of 1799. The ceremonies expanded with the years; and a discourse by the clergyman and an address by some outsider of distinction became recognized accompaniments of the proceedings.

In Boston the commemorations of the Pilgrims began with a formal and public celebration in 1793. There was an elaborate dinner, a very long list of toasts, including many which were both contemporary and political, much speech making, and an "Elegant and Patriotic Ode," by Mr. Thomas Paine, was duly sung, doubtless with ardent enthusiasm.

From these modest beginnings in Plymouth and Boston the celebrations of what came to be called "Forefathers' Day" multiplied beyond enumeration, following the migrations of the Mayflower descendants and of the children of New England across the continent, until now, in ever-increasing numbers, the anniversary of the landing in 1620 is marked and celebrated with each recurring year from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

It was in 1820, at the two hundredth anniversary, that Daniel Webster delivered his famous "Plymouth Oration." And here's an interesting thing: A prophecy made by Webster in that immortal oration was fulfilled a hundred years later. Webster said plated articles that have become tarnished are made bright in a few minutes. Wet metal, fresh from the bath needs no preliminary drying, for the current of air dries and polishes at the same moment. It is only necessary to pack the articles so that the air reaches them on all sides.

Forgiving. Several days after the Italian steel worker had asked for a day's leave of absence to attend his wife's funeral he again approached the foreman and in his peroration, picturing an assemblage 100 years later which would recount the nation's advancement:

On the morning of that day, although it will not disturb us in our repose, the voice of acclamation and gratitude commencing on the Rock of Plymouth shall be transmitted through millions of the sons of the Pilgrims until it loses itself in the murmurs of the Pacific seas.

Now, Senator Lodge, in his tercentenary oration quoted this fine passage. And as he spoke the words President Calvin Coolidge, then governor of Massachusetts, sitting in the ancient, rush-bottomed chair of Carver, the Pilgrim governor, talked by telephone across the continent with Governor Stephens of California at Sacramento. Thus was Webster's prophecy of 1820 fulfilled in 1920.

As to the meaning of the landing of the Pilgrims, it can be no more fittingly put than it was put by Cal-more was to elapse before the fact that in Plymouth something had once happened which merited celebration and made such demand for the outward signs of remembrance as to insist upon a visible manifestation. In January, 1793, a club was started by 12 young men of Plymouth, and in the following December they decided to have a dinner on December 22 in commemoration of the landing of the Pilgrims. Accordingly, upon that day there was a procession, and then a dinner was eaten, and toasts were given in honor of the leaders among the founders of the settlement. The following year, on the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, the people here again held a celebration, and this time they had an oration described in the record as "words spoken with modesty and firmness," by Edward Winslow, and there was also a poem by Alexander Scamwell. These commemorations went on through the years of the Revolution until 1793, and then came an unexplained gap of 12 years until 1805, when the celebration of the anniversary was again renewed, and continued thereafter with the omission only of 1799. The ceremonies expanded with the years; and a discourse by the clergyman and an address by some outsider of distinction became recognized accompaniments of the proceedings.

In Boston the commemorations of the Pilgrims began with a formal and public celebration in 1793. There was an elaborate dinner, a very long list of toasts, including many which were both contemporary and political, much speech making, and an "Elegant and Patriotic Ode," by Mr. Thomas Paine, was duly sung, doubtless with ardent enthusiasm.

From these modest beginnings in Plymouth and Boston the celebrations of what came to be called "Forefathers' Day" multiplied beyond enumeration, following the migrations of the Mayflower descendants and of the children of New England across the continent, until now, in ever-increasing numbers, the anniversary of the landing in 1620 is marked and celebrated with each recurring year from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

It was in 1820, at the two hundredth anniversary, that Daniel Webster delivered his famous "Plymouth Oration." And here's an interesting thing: A prophecy made by Webster in that immortal oration was fulfilled a hundred years later. Webster said

GRANT-YOUR-WISHES

Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes had promised the Dreamland King and Fairy Wondrous Secrets that she would visit a little girl that evening named Gladys. Gladys had been full of wishes of late. Particularly had she had one main wish, and it was about that wish that Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes was going to see her.

Gladys didn't know that she was going to have any visitors. No one had told her about the plans which had been made by the Dreamland King and Fairy Wondrous Secrets and Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes. And it came as a great surprise when suddenly she saw a lovely, dainty fairy perched on the end of her bed.

"Dear me," said Gladys, "now if I only were Lucille next door I would not have an old nightie. Lucille only has good nighties. She wears them all the time because she has no second best ones as I have." This was the way she greeted Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes. "I wish, Fairy, for I can see that you are a fairy; I wish very hard at times, and I do wish my wish would come true."

"I knew you were the one who wanted to see me. I knew it and the Dreamland King knew it, and so did Fairy Wondrous Secrets."

"They knew it? You knew it?" asked Gladys in surprise.

"Yes," said Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes, "it has been heard in Fairyland that you had a wish you wanted granted. My name is Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes. Allow me to introduce myself to you."

"How wonderful," said Gladys. "I am delighted to meet you."

"I am indeed pleased to meet you," said Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes, as she smiled sweetly at Gladys.

"But it is too bad, as I said," Gladys went on, "that you should call on me when I am wearing such a horrid old nightie. You see, it is of course cotton. And Lucille always has pretty ones with ribbons on them or embroidery, or something nice."

"Lucille has lots of money, and she doesn't have to do errands and odd jobs to try to make extra sums of money for her spending money."

"She gets a big allowance and never has to do a thing. She can have a soda water on Friday—and has the money for it, too. Yet I never have anything left by Friday, for it is Saturday when I am able to get a little money—and by the following Friday I never have anything left."

"You seem to talk a great deal about Lucille. Is your wish anything about her?" asked Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes.

"Oh, how did you guess?" cried Gladys excitedly. "I suppose because you are a wonderful fairy. Oh, yes, I would give anything if I could be in Lucille's place. I envy her so."

"She has everything and I have hardly anything. If I could have my wish I'd like to put myself in Lucille's place."

"Granted," said Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes.

And before Gladys could tell what was happening she suddenly found herself in Lucille's bed and it was time to get up. She had beautiful clothes to put on, and when she looked in the looking-glass she looked just like Lucille.

"When she went downstairs Lucille's daddy—though he called her 'my child,' gave her a dollar—and then told her that she could go to the circus that afternoon."

"Goodie," she cried, and as she was finishing her breakfast he added: "I don't want you to stand and watch the parade, though. You would only get tired and your mother is going to take you with her in the automobile."

But she could hardly see anything from the automobile and she wanted to get down and watch the parade from the curb, but she wasn't allowed to do that. She seemed to think and feel like Gladys, but here she was, Lucille, without a doubt! And oh dear, she began to feel she didn't like it. She had no sister and no brothers. There was nothing that was a "treat."

"Oh, dear," she said, "I wish I were Gladys again." And before she knew it she found her mother waking her up and saying:

"Hurry, Gladys, your brother is waiting for you to see the circus unload!"

And oh, what fun it was to be Gladys again. For somehow she had been Gladys so long that she wasn't happy stepping into the shoes of anyone else. She and herself had been pals so long, and the good fairy Grant-Your-Wishes had not only granted her the first but the second wish!

Holiday Ideas for Shoppers

Card Table Numbers.

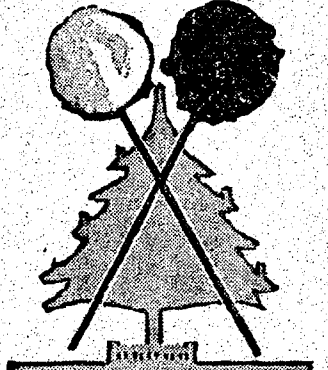

A pretty set of card table numbers, especially when made by the donor, will please every hostess. Here is a set, made of heavy black paper, cut into three-inch squares and having pictures of girls' heads pasted against the painted numbers. A fine silk cord, supporting a tiny pencil is fastened through a hole punched in a corner of each card.

Fancy Silk Hand Bags.

Very handsome hand bags, in new patterns of figured or brocaded ribbons, will make their recipients happy this Christmas. The envelope bag pictured is made of tapestry ribbon, bordered with black, and the bag below it reveals a richly colored Egyptian design with mock jewels set along the mounting. Both are lined with plain silk, and colors are chosen to suit individual fancy.

For Dressing Table.

A pair of long sawtooths, wound with narrow green ribbon, a small mirror a fat powder puff and two double red silk poppies will make this pretty pair of toilet requisites. The mirror is bound with red ribbon, gathered at the edges. After the sawtooths have been sewed to place, the poppies are flattened, placed over them and tacked down about the edges.

Plain and figured silk or cretonne may be used to cover a cardboard wastebasket and convert it into a handsome gift for either a man or woman. First cover the basket with the plain fabric and then apply the pointed medallions and outline them with a fancy braid.

Costs Less to Keep Clean. More than 250,000 deaths and over 4,500,000 cases of serious illness annually are ascribed by Federal and State health reports to needlessly unsanitary conditions. It is an amazing fact that most of this needless lack of sanitation is found, not in the cities, but among the rural and small-town population.

Yet wholly sanitary conditions may be brought about in the country just as quickly and easily as in the city. The actual expenditure involved is very small, especially when you consider how much the family's health will be improved as a result. It will assure also, of course, a great improvement in comfort.

Septic tanks, privy vaults, protection for domestic water supplies, rat-proof outbuildings—all of these can be provided for a little cost and a little work by any man. Full directions on how to do it, what is the best structure for each job, what tools you will require, how much cement, how to mix and place the concrete—all this may be had free on request to the Portland Cement Association, 111 West Washington Street, Chicago. Ask for "Concrete in Home Sanitation"; you will get it free by return mail.—Adv.

NURSE GAINS 15 LBS. ON TANLAC

Miss Mary Early, 1531 North 20th St., Omaha, Neb., practical nurse for the past fifteen years, prompted by gratitude for the Tanlac treatment, because of its benefits to her and others, recently gave out the following statement:

"Tanlac is the one medicine I can recommend knowing full well it merits the highest praise, not only because of what it has done for me, but because of what I have seen it do for others. My brother was flat on his back with typhoid for a long time, and afterwards was so weak he could barely walk from one chair to another. I gave him Tanlac and it was simply marvelous the way it built him up. 'Nursing him through this illness left me weak and exhausted. I couldn't eat anything to speak of and my food hurt me, but Tanlac gave me a keen appetite, strengthened my digestion, and I gained fifteen pounds in weight and am still in perfect health. As a nurse and user of Tanlac, I give it my unqualified endorsement.'"

Mt. Clemens Man Had No Appetite And Was Weak And Run Down Until He Took Hypo-Cod

Samuel Jones of Mt. Clemens, Mich., says that he feels like a different man since he took Hypo-Cod. He was in a run down weak, ened condition and had scarcely any appetite and was unable to get any rest at night. He was nervous and getting thinner and thinner every day. Everything he ate seemed to disagree with him. After taking four bottles of Hypo-Cod he could eat anything and at the same time and not suffer for it afterwards. He gained in strength and took on eight pounds of flesh. He is now able to sleep throughout the night and wake up refreshed and rested. He feels that others who suffered as he did should know of this great medicine and give it a chance to bring them back to health as he was brought back. Hypo-Cod is a wonderful and powerful health building tonic and over a million and one-half bottles have been sold. It is growing more popular every day and is making true friends wherever it is taken. It will do all that is claimed for it and you will like its pleasant wine-like flavor. Use Hot Air as Polisher

The marvels of friction are infinite. The use of the sand-blast for polishing metals is an instance in point, as is that of a blast of simple hot air. It is the velocity that gives the polishing power. The articles to be treated are placed in a basket in a centrifugal machine driven at a very high speed and heated air is blown from a pipe through the basket. A high polish is thus produced very rapidly. Nickel-

Grease Spots. To remove a grease spot from a leather handbag, shoe or leather article, first moisten the stain around the edges with water, then paint the stain with a solution of rubber, such as is ordinarily used by motorists and bicyclists to repair punctures. After a few minutes the layer of rubber may be peeled off, when the grease stain, having been absorbed by the rubber, will have disappeared. This method has the advantage that the treatment may be confined to the stained parts.

Order of St. Charles

Monaco, a little country of only eight square miles, is an independent principality on the shores of the Mediterranean, near Nice. The famous town of Monte Carlo is within its boundaries. The government has an order, known as the Order of St. Charles. This order was established in 1858 by Prince Charles III to reward services rendered to the principality or to the reigning prince, says the Detroit News. Several Americans have been recipients of the honor. The badge is a white Maltese cross resting on a green wreath. In the center is the double monogram "C. C." and a crown on a crimson background, surrounded by the motto "Principes et Patria." The whole is surmounted by a crown. The ribbon is red, with a white band down the center.

LIVESTOCK LEGUMES LIMESTONE MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

Money-Making Idea Number 3.
Here's the idea: "Do something for the hens and the hens will do something for you." Use this idea.

An increased income is possible on all Crawford County farms through poultry. You will receive this postal at exactly the right time to attend to it.

All work on Corn and Potatoes is done. Work at the Hen House when ground is frozen too hard to plow.

You don't need an expensive house to get eggs. Tighten up the hen house with boards and tar paper. Clean it out to a finish. Delouse every crack; hen and roost, and whole hen house to beat the band.

Put in more windows. Replace broken lights.

Keep a foot of straw on the floor. Supply constantly oyster shell for lime; very fine gravel for hen's gizzards; a box of dry dust for her to wallow in; fresh mangle or cabbage every day; warm water renewed several times a day; keep a quart or two of clover or alfalfa leaves before them all the time; give them skim milk every day; cull out, sell fat old hens; feed three times a day, a different kind of feed each time, and you will get eggs.

No farm effort pays as well as hens given decent care.

Our winter market for eggs is splendid.

Eggs are worth trying for and can be made to buy the groceries for the family.

How funny folks are. Many of them pinching along, hardly knowing where the next dollar or the groceries are coming from, and dissatisfied with farm life. Yet, they will not reach out and use what has helped many a farmer—a well-kept flock of well-culled hens.

Plenty of Chances Here.

Crawford County affords plenty of chances for a good and satisfactory farm life, if the chances were only used by our farmers.

Many quit their farms saying that there is nothing in farming.

The real truth is that they have never given real farming a chance, a try-out.

They have just followed a little, narrow profitless routine.

We farmers have got to have more adaptability.

Mr. Meacher Said It.

Mr. George Meacher told me at the Saginaw fair that his hens brought him in $843 in the year just past.

A Line of Cheer.

"From yesterday I hope to learn how I may face the road today."

And when I come to some new turn choose properly the proper way.

As for today, I hope to gain.

From out its need of joy or sorrow the chart laid down so clear and plain that I shall not go wrong tomorrow."

To Young Men.

The relatively low prices of farm a realization that the farmers of Wisconsin along with their kind in other states are suffering sore distress because of the low prices generally prevailing for too many of the products of the farm.

"It cannot last long, and prosperity is sure to return to the farmer's son who face the crisis boldly and push steadily on. Agriculture is the one great basic industry of this country and it will soon come back into its own. There is an old saying worthy of keeping in mind at this time: 'Buy when others are eager to sell; sell when others are eager to buy; sell many young men whose fathers own good farms are turning their attention to other occupations. This condition is causing thoughtful men to be concerned for fear that many will make a mistake by leaving the farm at this time. W. A. Henry, former Dean of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, in an open letter to the farmer boys of Wisconsin, in part says:

"I am distressed and depressed by products is causing many people to leave farms, and especially to abandon those which produce low yields, and when others are eager to buy."

"Now is the time to put heart and soul into agricultural effort of all reasonable kinds. To young men who have been planning to take the short course in agriculture at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture this winter, I say, in all seriousness, do so by all means and you will never regret it."

The advice which Dean Henry has given the boys of Wisconsin applies equally well to the boys in all states. It is characteristic of the American people to swing too violently either out or into an industry. As a general rule, it is a pretty good thing to stick by an industry or to enter it when a large number are leaving it—Hoard's Dairyman.

THE N. E. MICH. POTATO SHOW.

Potatoes, around which grouped the interests of the town of Gaylord, Otsego County, and NorthEastern Michigan for three days, November 7th, 8th and 9th, are once again firmly implanted in the affections of the people in the northern sections. The battle surged long and furiously about the tubers, but, in the end, they emerged, none the worse for the skirmish—and possibly better!

The first Top O'Michigan show was a success. F. C. Gaylord, of Purdue University, judge of the exhibits, said that the first north-east Michigan show was superior to the Grand Rapids show held last year, particularly from the standpoint of exhibits. W. H. Hill, agricultural agent for the New York Central Lines, west, said that, in his estimation, the show was destined to give NorthEastern Michigan more publicity than any exhibition, fair, or single attraction put on during the year. He claimed it was not only great advertising feature, but, its educational effects were likewise far reaching.

F. J. Shipp, president of the potato show, was pleased with the awards, and the results of the show. He declared that the number of people in attendance was a surprise to the most ardent backers of the exhibition. He claims that the number of entries made by the growers is proof of the interest which the potato growers had in the show. There were 162 entries from NorthEastern Michigan and three from outside the section which were not entered for premiums.

In the opinion expressed by A. C. Lytle, county agent of Otsego county, and E. J. Leenhouts, assistant agricultural agent for the New York Central Lines, west, the potato show was a distinct success. The two men, who had worked for days ahead of time putting up exhibits, getting entries, handling details of the show, and generally putting things in shape for the first Gaylord tuber show, were well satisfied with the interest which the business men of the NorthEastern counties displayed and with the whole-hearted co-operation of the potato growers themselves.

A number of interesting speeches were given at the banquet held November 8th, in the Knights of Pythias hall. Close to 110 people attended the dinner. W. P. Hartman, Director of the Bureau of Foods and Standards, Michigan State Department of Agriculture, made a plea for the growers to raise the type of products which the market demands. He emphasized the importance of grading and the value of eliminating the culls from the product which is shipped in to the eastern markets. His talk in the afternoon of the second day was one of the highlights of the first potato show.

Elmer Smith, president of the Gaylord Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the growers at the dinner. He expressed a desire that the potato show be held in Gaylord each year saying that the latch string was out, always, and that the people of the town were interested in seeing the visitors enjoy their stay in Gaylord. A speech by H. C. Moore, extension specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College and a recognized authority on potatoes, spoke of the show as a milestone in the progress being made to better potatoes. He claimed that it was the best show he had attended in the state and one of the best he had ever attended. He lauded Otsego County and the northern counties on their ability to raise such a high grade of certified seed stock and said that the southern counties would always look to the north for its best grade seed stock.

W. H. Hill of the New York Central and T. F. Moore, secretary of the NorthEastern Michigan Development Bureau, stressed the importance of such features as the Top O'Michigan Potato Show to bind the north-east counties together and to develop co-operation among the residents of the territory.
